1 Preface

On September 18, 2003, jburke created a topic on the Zompist Bulletin Board with the aim of allowing conlangers to examine trends in sound changes within natlang families. It has since expanded to provide conlangers with a general gist of plausible sound changes in general. The thread, in its current iteration, is available here: <http://www.incatena.org/viewtopic.php?f=10&t=1533>. Many of the compilations of sound changes have either come from pages in the thread or from pages on the KneeQuickie Correspondence Library archives (available at http://kneequickie.com/archive/The\_Correspondence\_Library; the page at http://www.kneequickie.com/kq/The\_Correspondence\_Library has not yet been updated with subpages for sound changes); if an entry in this list has no known contributor listed, it is from KneeQuickie's Correspondence Library.

The intended purpose of this document is to provide a tool in PDF form for conlangers interested in diachronic conlanging and linguistic change to be able to get a feel for what sorts of changes might plausibly occur. To that end, this document features a compilation of various historical series of diachronic sound changes (and on occasion some synchronic processes as well) that have occurred in natural languages. It is hoped that the changes featured within this document will be of use in these endeavors.

No warrant is made that the entirety of the information herein is complete or correct. The ZBB was migrated over to a different setup some years back causing many special characters to disappear. Further, not all sources use IPA transcription, and may be unclear or missing information. Additionally, when listing sources, Wikipedia pages may be given with `https:\\` instead of `http:\\`, even though the page may have been accessed using `http:\\` instead of `https:\\`; this is for security, although doing so may in reality be pointless.

Due to the limits of the L<sup>A</sup>T<sub>E</sub>X software (and the skills of its user), full nesting is not possible. It is hoped that readers will understand and it is one of the goals of this project to provide correct nesting as far as is possible. Additionally, some overlap or multiple versions of changes may be present due to the nature of submitted sound-change lists.

Finally, many thanks to all individuals who contributed to the Library. Without you, this document would not exist.

3 Contact Information

Questions, comments, corrections, suggestions, missing authors for those changes taken from KneeQuickie, or other feedback may be sent to Pogostick Man at the Zompist Bulletin Board or the New Conlang Bulletin Board, Pan Pogostick at Polskie Forum Językowe, the CONLANG mailing list, or to `mailto:satorarepotenetoperarotas3@gmail.com`. Submitting corrections or lists of sound changes, preferably sourced, is encouraged.

4 Changelog

- v.1.0 (2013/11/26) – Initial public release.
- v.1.1 (2013/11/26) – Small amendment to the preamble.
- v.1.2 (2013/11/26) – Small amendment to the preamble including a link to the KQ category where some of the changes were taken from.
- v.1.3 (2013/11/26) – Added omitted attribution on Wales Iñupiaq changes; alteration to changelog layout and amendment to Contact Information.
- v.1.4 (2013/11/26) – Forgot to update the version information in the title.
- v.1.5 (2013/12/01) – Added changes from Proto-Slavic to Polish, which I forgot to include in the original release. Also, added a Proto-Salish phonology I also forgot to include in the original release.
- v.1.6 (2013/12/03) – Added the California Vowel Shift.
- v.1.7 (2013/12/03) – Fixed the California Vowel Shift.
- v.1.8 (2013/12/06) – Credited Macska for the Pre-Slavic Vowel Changes.
- v.2.0 (2014/03/11) – Added Yokuts and Lakes Plain correspondences.
- v.2.1 (2014/03/11) – Forgot to change version number on the first page.
- v.2.2 (2014/03/11) – Moved Yokuts to the Penutian group; fixed some errors.
- v.3.0 (2014/03/27) – Added Northwest Caucasian, fixed Yokuts nesting errors.
- v.3.1 (2014/03/27) – Notes per Tropylium’s request and some formatting cleanup/explanation in the section on Northwest Caucasian.
- v.3.2 (2014/04/03) – Added considerable information on developments in West Germanic.
- v.3.3 (2014/04/03) – Cross-listed some of the West Germanic developments under the Vowel Shifts section; minor fixes.
- v.4.0 (2014/04/03) – Replicated the “Most wanted sound changes” article from Knee-Quickie.
- v.4.1 (2014/04/03) – Minor fixes.
- v.4.2 (2014/04/04) – Minor correction.
- v.5.0 (2014/04/28) – Added some Macro-Pama-Nyungan correspondences.

- v.5.1 (2014/04/30) – Correction of formatting errors; change of all remaining instances of “Linguifex” and “Rorschach” to “Pogostick Man”; amendment to contact info; other minor changes; addition of Proto-Tuparí consonantal reconstruction.
- v.5.2 (2014/05/13) – Added Qiangic, Proto-Lolo-Burmese final -i(C) and -u(C) sequences, Paiwan, Rukai, and changes to Old Provençal.
- v.5.3 (2014/05/13) – Added changes to Rhaeto-Romance.
- v.5.4 (2014/05/28) – Added Austronesian, Turkic, and Italic.
- v.6.0 (2014/06/21) – Added Northeast Caucasian and Vasconic; clarified the situation with regards to sources without a known author (these are mostly from KneeQuickie); explained policy with regards to URLs when dealing with Wikipedia pages; corrected the description of the shorthand symbol  $\langle\% \rangle$ ; added a note from Tropylium on the Finno-Ugric changes.
- v.6.1 (2014/07/18) – Added some Austronesian changes; corrected Avestan according to comments from Alex Fink on CONLANG-L.
- v.7.0 (2015/01/31) – Added some changes to the Austronesian section (including Proto-Ongan); added some changes regarding the Bantu languages and related groups; added changes for Standard German and Gothic; added correspondences for Monde languages; added Trans-New Guinea section. Cleaned up the Key to Abbreviations.
- v.7.1 (2015/01/31) – Corrected an accidentally omitted attribution.
- v.7.2 (2015/01/31) – Corrected a typo in the changelog.
- v.7.3 (2015/01/31) – Corrected an oversight in formatting.
- v.7.4 (2015/02/01) – Formatting and attribution fixes. Added reconstructed Proto-Trans New Guinea phonology.
- v.7.5 (2015/02/03) – Correcting omissions, including an acknowledgment that a quote from Whimemsz is sourced from KneeQuickie.
- v.7.6 (2015/02/25) – Fixed misspelling of “Falsican”; fixed an alphabetical ordering error in the Indo-European section.
- v.8.0 (2015/11/16) – Added Piscataway, Mi’kmaq, and Cree correspondences to the Algonquian section; added Kainantu-Goroka correspondences to the Trans-New Guinea section; added Vandalic correspondences; added some rGyalrongic and Tibetic correspondences to the Sino-Tibetan section; added Philippine and Oceanic correspondences to the Austronesian section; added Pai correspondences to the Yuman-Cochimí section; added Chumashan correspondences; added Ofaié-Jê correspondences; added Bakairi correspondences; added Lenmichian correspondences; added some Na-Dene correspondences and moved the Athabaskan section under Na-Dene. Fixed a formatting error in the changelog.

- v.8.1 (2015/11/16) – Corrected some formatting errors.

5 Key to Abbreviations

Unless otherwise noted, the symbols below stand for:

- ” = Stress
- ! = Except when...
- (...X) = For any number of X remaining
- X<sub>0</sub> = The same/an identical X
- X<sup>n</sup> = X with a given tone
- X<sub>n</sub> = The *n*th X of a sequence or series
- X<sub>x</sub> = All X of a sequence or series
- X̣ = Retroflex/emphatic X
- # = Word boundary
- $ = Stem boundary
- % = Syllable boundary (or if X is one syllable away, or just representing a syllable in some changes from KneeQuickie or the ZBB)
- Ø = Nothing/Null/Zero
- A = Affricate
- B = Back vowel
- C = Consonant
- D = Voiced plosive
- E = Front vowel
- F = Fricative
- H = Laryngeal
- J = Approximant
- K = Velar
- Ƕ = Palatovelar
- L = Liquid
- M = Diphthong
- N = Nasal
- O = Obstruent
- P = Labial/Bilabial
- Q = Uvular consonant; click consonant (Khoisan)
- R = Resonant/Sonorant
- S = Plosive
- T = Voiceless plosive
- U = Syllable
- V = Vowel
- W = Semivowel
- Z = Continuant

6 Afro-Asiatic

For these Afro-Asiatic changes,  $s_1$ ,  $s_2$ ,  $s_3$ ,  $h_1$ , and  $h_2$  are consonants, believed to have most likely been fricatives, of indeterminate reconstruction. Dashes denote stem boundaries. What is given here as  $*q$  is described by Ehret as a “voiceless pharyngeal plosive”.

The phonemic inventory of Proto-Afro-Asiatic has been reconstructed as follows:

	Labial	Alveolar	Palatal	Velar	Pharyngeal	Glottal
Nasal	m	n
Plosive	p p' b	t t' t <sup>h</sup> d d <sup>h</sup>	c c' ʃ	k k <sup>w</sup> k' k <sup>w</sup> ' g g <sup>w</sup>		ʔ
Fricative	f	s s' z		x x <sup>w</sup> ɣ ɣ <sup>w</sup>	ħ ʕ	h
Lat. Fric.		ɬ
Affricate		ts dz
Trill		r
Approximant		l	j	w
			Front	Central	Back
		Close	i		u
		Open		a

7 Algonquian

Proto-Algonquian is believed to have had the following phonology, as provided for by the Wikipedia:

	Labial	Alveolar	Palatal/Postalveolar	Velar	Glottal
Nasal	m	n
Plosive	p	t		k	ʔ
Fricative		θ s	ʃ		h
Affricate			tʃ
Rhotic		r
Approximant	w		j

	Front	Central	Back
Close	i i:
Mid	e e:		o o:
Open		a a:

The phoneme denoted as /θ/ may well have been actually /ɬ/ instead. Also, some debate exists as to whether or not /r/ was originally an /l/.

8 Altaic

The Wikipedia gives the following reconstruction, slightly adapted, for a hypothetical Proto(-Macro)-Altaic language, citing Blažek (2006) citing Sarostin et al. (2003) and porting over into IPA:

	Bilabial	Alveolar/Dental	Alveolopalatal	Postalveolar	Palatal	Velar
Nasal	m	n	n <sup>j</sup>
Plosive	p p <sup>h</sup> b	t t <sup>h</sup> d				k k <sup>h</sup> g
Fricative		s z
Affricate				tʃ tʃ <sup>h</sup> dʒ
Trill		r	r <sup>j</sup>
Approximant		l	l <sup>j</sup>

	Front	Central	Back
Close	i y		u
Mid	e ø		o
Near-Open	æ
Open		a

*z would only have ever existed word-initially; *r and *j would only have been medial. In addition, Proto-(Macro)-Altaic also is thought to have had a bitonal pitch-accent system, with the syllable carrying the tone.

NB: The Altaic grouping is highly controversial and is not accepted by many mainstream linguists.

 $p \rightarrow \phi \rightarrow h \text{ / } \#_{-}$
 $d \text{ g} \rightarrow t \text{ k}$  (may have been part of a more sweeping merger; Firespeaker calls it “lenisfortis”)

 $\{d,n\}^j s^j \rightarrow j \int / \#_-$
 $r^j \rightarrow z$

NB: Most likely incomplete; all changes listed are stated as being “[s]hared with Nogay and Karakalpak”

$tʃ \rightarrow ʃ$
 $j \rightarrow dʒ / \#_-$  (did not occur in Qara Nogay)
 $dʒ \rightarrow ʒ$  (did not occur in Qara Nogay or Central Nogay)

 $\{u, \text{w}\} \text{w} \{i, y\} \text{w} \text{aw} \{æ, e\} \text{w} \rightarrow u: y: o: \emptyset:$
 $\gamma \rightarrow \emptyset / \text{V}_-\text{V}$
 $æ \text{Vh} \{ɣ, h\} \rightarrow a: \text{V}: \emptyset$  (seems to have largely been confined to loanwords from Persian)
 $j \rightarrow dʒ / \#_-$
 $x \rightarrow q$
 $nj \rightarrow jn$
 $\emptyset \rightarrow U / \#_- \{l, r\}$  (not sure what  $\langle U \rangle$  represents here; maybe just some sort of back vowel?)
 $e \rightarrow i / \_g$
 $e \rightarrow i / k\_y$  (maybe they mean  $k\_j$ ?)

8.5.2 Proto-Turkic to Sakha

$\{e, \text{v}\}: \rightarrow je$  (the second one is conjectured based on my admittedly sparse knowledge of Turkish; I can only guess that  $\langle \text{e} \rangle$  is some sort of back unrounded vowel)
 $o \text{og} \emptyset \text{og} ig \rightarrow wo \text{u} \emptyset o: \emptyset: i:$
 $a\{\text{ǵ}(\text{w}), b\} \{o\{\text{ǵ}, b\}, a\text{ǵ}u\} u\{\text{ǵ}, b\} \rightarrow \text{u}qa \text{wo} u:$
 $i\text{ǵ} \rightarrow \text{u}r: \rightarrow i:$  (but original  $\text{u}r:$  unaffected?)
 $eg \rightarrow \{je, i:, ji\}$
 $d \text{s} \{ʃ, z \rightarrow t \emptyset \text{s} / \text{V}_-\text{V}$
 $s \rightarrow \emptyset / \#_-$
 $\{z, ʃ\} \rightarrow h$
 $j \rightarrow s$  (possibly only initially?)

9 Austroasiatic

9.1 Vietic

Thompson reconstructs the following phonetic system for Proto-Viet-Muong:

	Bilabial	Alveolar	Palatal	Velar	Glottal
Nasal	$\text{ṁ m}$	$\text{ṇ n}$	$\text{ṣ ɲ}$	$\text{ŋ ɳ}$
Plosive	$\text{p b}$	$\text{t t}^* \text{ d d}^*$	$\text{c ɟ}$	$\text{k g}$	ʔ
Liquid	$\text{ṽ w}$	$\text{ḷ l ɾ r}$	$\text{ḵ j}$
	Front		Center	Back
High	$\text{i iə}$		$\text{i iə}$	$\text{u uə}$
High-Mid	$\text{e}$		$\text{ə əː}$	$\text{o}$
Low-Mid	$\text{ɛ}$			$\text{ɔ}$
Low			$\text{a aː}$

Further, Thompson reconstructs Proto-Vietic as having had four tones, *A, *B, *C, and *D. In the development of Vietnamese, *B and *D merged.

Thompson lists a few occasional alterations between Muong Khen and Vietnamese, but I'm not sure exactly which two languages were being compared, so I'm shunting the alterations here.

-o	:	*-əw
-u	:	*-əw
-i	:	*-əj
-e	:	*-əj
a	:	ia

The -e : *-əj correspondence was listed as being rarer than the others.

$s \rightarrow t^{(\text{h}?)}$

$\{\text{ə}k^{\text{h}}, \text{ə}g^{\text{fi}}\} \rightarrow ʃ$  (I think Thompson implied this was just a bit of a kludge)

Finals:

$l \rightarrow \emptyset / \{i, e\}_-$

$l \rightarrow j / \text{else}$

$c n \rightarrow t n / ! E_-$  (apparently the precursor to Vietnamese short  $*a$  was treated as a short vowel here)

Thompson seems to list some changes as affecting Modern Vietnamese but I was unsure of where to put them so they’ll go here:

$a \text{ ɔ} \rightarrow i\text{ə } u\text{ə}$

In the original those first vowels were underlined.

10 Austronesian

Wikipedia gives the following reconstruction of Proto-Austronesian created by Robert Blust:

	Labial	Alveolar	Palatal	Retroflex	Velar	Glottal
Nasal	m	n	ɲ		ŋ	(q,ʔ)
Plosive	p b	t d		ɳ	k g gʲ
Fricative		s	ç			h
Affricate		ts	cç jʝ
Lateral		l	ɭ

Points of this phonology are in great dispute; Blust himself states this.

11 Northeast Caucasian

Proto-Northeast Caucasian is reconstructed as having had the following consonant inventory. Phonemes in parentheses or braces are so marked on User:Petusek’s page. Due to the inventory, the usual table format is modified.

	Nasal	Plosive	Fricative	Affricate	Cluster	Resonant
Bilabial	m	(p) b
Alveolar	n	t t’ (d)	s (sː)	ts tsː ts’ tsː’ dz	st stː	r
Lateral			ɬ ɬː	tɬ tɬː tɬ’ tɬː’ (dɬ)		l
Postalveolar			ʃ ʃː	tʃ tʃː tʃ’ tʃː’ dʒ
Velar			(x) (xː)	k (kː) k’ (kː’) g
Uvular				q qː (q’) qː’ (ɢ)
Pharyngeal					{ʕ}
Glottal		{ʔ}

My guess is that what I’ve transcribed here as length (it’s represented by doubled consonants in the source) is probably supposed to represent some sort of fortis-lenis distinction, given that in other places I think I’ve seen these doubled consonants in initial position, although I might be wrong, as I’m not very familiar with the morphology of the languages in question. Consonants such as *tsː are written ⟨tts⟩ in the source; unless it’s the actual fricative that is geminate, the stop is the doubled consonant.

13 Chumashan

Klar (1977) reconstructs the following phonemic inventory for Proto-Chumashan:

	Bilabial	Dental	Palatoalveolar	Velar	Uvular	Glottal
Nasal	m <sup>ʔ</sup> m	n <sup>ʔ</sup> n
Stop	p p'	t t'		k k'	q q'	ʔ
Affricate		ts ts'	tʃ tʃ'
Fricative		s (s')	ʃ (ʃ')			h
Approximant	w <sup>ʔ</sup> w	l <sup>ʔ</sup> l	j <sup>ʔ</sup> j

	Front	Central	Back
High	i	ɨ	u
Mid	e		o
Low		a

Ablaut and vowel harmony appear to have been productive in the proto-language; it is possible that consonant harmony affecting sibilants was also productive. *i may have been a loan phoneme.

14 Elamo-Dravidian

McAlpin (1974) reconstructs Proto-Elamo-Dravidian as having the following phonemic inventory; the following table is slightly modified for reasons to be explained.

	Bilabial	Alveolar	Palatal	Velar
Nasal	m m:	n n:
Plosive	p	t t:	c c:	k k:
Fricative	v (?)	s
Liquid		ɾ ɾ l l:	j	w

High	i		u
Mid	e		o
Low		a

What here is denoted *s the author has *š for, but no other sibilant is readily identifiable in his paper. He makes mention of language written in cuneiform which may have influenced this convention. The phonemes *ɾ and *ɾ seem to have been contrastive rhotics. In *NS clusters, the nasal appears to have assimilated to the following stop.

(From McAlpin, David W. (1974), “Toward Proto-Elamo-Dravidian”. Language 50(1):89 – 101)

14.1 Proto-Elamo-Dravidian to Proto-Dravidian

Pogostick Man, from McAlpin, David W. (1974), “Toward Proto-Elamo-Dravidian”. Language 50(1):89 – 101

w → v / #_{i,e}lV

w → v / V_

k f k → k* k: / V_V (the asterisk-marked k is what McAlpin terms “weak k”, which tends to drop out in morphology)

t → Ø / #_VrC

t → {t,t} / V_V

rt → t / V_V

p → v / V_V

s → t / #_VLV

s → j / V_{V,#}

s → Ø / #V_{ɾ,l}

s → Ø / C_V

s → Ø / V_C

$\dot{r} \rightarrow \underline{r}$
 $\acute{r} \rightarrow r / V\_V$
 $n \ n: \ r n \rightarrow \{\underline{n}, r\} \ \underline{n}(:) \ \eta / V\_V$ $n: \rightarrow \underline{n}(:)$ $n\dot{r} \rightarrow \underline{nr}$
 $l \ l: \rightarrow \{l, \underline{l}\} \ l(:) / V\_V$

Proto-Dravidian retained long vowels, possibly from the simplification of consonant clusters and/or deletion of intervocalic consonants with compensatory lengthening and/or the resulting vowels in hiatus merging

14.2 Proto-Elamo-Dravidian to Achaemanid Elamite

15 Eskimo-Aleut

The following phonological reconstruction of Proto-Eskimo-Aleut is adapted from Wikipedia.

	Labial	Alveolar	Palatal	Velar	Uvular
Nasal	m	n (n <sup>j</sup> )		ŋ
Plosive	p	t t <sup>j</sup>		k	q
Fricative/Affricate	v	ð c s <sup>j</sup>		ɣ	ʁ
Lateral Fricative		(ɬ)
Approximant		l	j
	Front	Central	Back
High	i		u
Mid		ə
Low		a

It is noted that *n and *n<sup>j</sup> may not have been distinct phonemes; the article cites Fortescue mentioning that Sirilenski Eskimo has instances of initial /j/ whereas others have /n/; that *c *s<sup>j</sup> may have been either fricatives (*s *s<sup>j</sup>) or affricates (*ts *ts<sup>j</sup>), the source being unclear; and that *ɬ may have actually arisen from *l + plosive combinations.

(From Wikipedia contributors (2013), “Proto-Eskimo–Aleut language”. Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=Proto-Eskimo%E2%80%93Aleut\_language&oldid=573345407)

16.1 Tabla-Sentani

Proto-Tabla-Sentani is reconstructed by Gregerson and Hartzler (1987) as having had the following phonology:

	Bilabial	Alveolar	Palatal	Velar
Nasal	m	n
Plosive	p b	t d		k
Approximant			j	w
	Front	Central	Back
Close	i		u
Mid	e	ə	o
Open		a

(From Gregerson, Kenneth, and Margaret Hartzler (1987), “Towards a Reconstruction of Proto-Tabla-Sentani Phonology”. Oceanic Linguistics, Vol. 26, No. 1/2 (Summer – Winter, 1987), 1 – 29.)

Some vowel assimilations, mostly dealing with central vowels
o → e (sporadic, highly unusual)

17 Indo-European

Wikipedia gives the following phonological reconstruction for Proto-Indo-European, reproduced here with some slight adjustments for presentation's sake:

	Labial	Coronal	Palatovelar	Plain Velar	Labiovelar	Laryngeal
Nasal	m	n
Plosive	p b b <sup>h</sup>	t d d <sup>h</sup>	k̑ g̑ g̑ <sup>h</sup>	k g g <sup>h</sup>	k <sup>w</sup> g <sup>w</sup> g <sup>w</sup> <sup>h</sup>
Fricative		s				h <sub>1</sub> h <sub>2</sub> h <sub>3</sub>
Approximant		ɹ	j		w
Lat. Approx.		l

There is some debate as to whether the voiced and voiced aspirate stops were actually glottalized and plain voiced, respectively; the status of the palatovelars, plain velars, and labiovelars as possible plain velar, uvular, and labialized uvular consonants, or as to whether the labiovelars existed at all, are also subjects of much contention.

	Front	Central	Back
Mid	e eː		o oː
Back		(a) (aː)

It is noted in the source that the nasals, approximants, and potentially laryngeals could also act as vowels; such allophones of /j w/ would then be [i u]. There is some debate over the presence of /a aː/ in the language, although the Wikipedia does mention that if Stang's law holds, /aː/ at least must have been phonemic.

The accentual system was apparently a sort of free pitch accent, heavily related to ablaut and the vestiges of which may be best seen in Vedic Sanskrit, Ancient Greek, and Lithuanian and some West South Slavic tongues.

17.7.1 Common Germanic to Gothic

Pogostick Man, from Wright, Joseph (1910). Grammar of the Gothic Language, 2nd Ed.; and Wikipedia contributors (2014). “Gothic language”. Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia. http://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=Gothic\_language&oldid=

NB: Wright seems to regard Germanic labiovelars as sequences of velar + w if I'm reading this right; additionally it looks like some of what Wright considers diphthongs may have been long monophthongs

Stressed vowels:

- o e → u i
- u → ɔ / _{r,h} (unless this r “arose from older s by assimilation”)
- i → ε / _{r,h,ʌ}
- æ: → e:
- ew → iw

Unstressed vowels:

- V[- long] → Ø / _# ! V = u
- V[- long] → Ø / U_C# ! V = u
- Inherited “long final vowels... became shortened in polysyllabic words, when the vowels in question originally had the ‘broken’ accent, but remained unshortened when they originally had the ‘slurred’ accent”
- aj → a / U_#
- “Originally long diphthongs became shortened in final syllables”

$z \rightarrow s / -\#$ , though “[t]his s was dropped when it came to stand after an original s through the loss of a vowel”, though it “remained when protected by a particle”

V: → V[-long] / _C{:C} ! _st{#,V} or when preceding a cluster which had triggered a vowel to become long in Old English; the book gives “Christ” vs. “Christmas” as an example ea e:a eo e:o → a ε: e e:

æj → aj → ej

{æj,e(:)j} → ej

ay → aw

{eah,eaç,eax,eaj,eay} → aw

e:aw i:rw → ew ju

{a:w,a:y,o:w} → ɔ:w

oy → ɔ:w / _V

{a:ht,o(:)ht} → ow

a: most likely became one of {e:,ε:}

a e o → a: ε: o: / in U[+open] ! in #U with the following U containing /i:/ or ending in one of /m n r l/y(:) → i(:)

V: → V[-long] / in #U before a U with /i:/

n → Ø / _# when unstressed (not clear as to whether m → n beforehand in this position or not)

j tʃ → g k

ʃ → s / in unstressed syllables

ʌ became a sound spelled ⟨qu⟩

hn {wl,hl} hr → w l r

ȝ → g / #-

ȝ → w / C-V

{e,a,o} → ə → Ø / _#, when unstressed (it appears this sound may also have gone to /ɪ/)

17.7.2.1.9 Early Northern Middle English to Scots Pogostick Man, from Wikipedia contributors (2014), “Phonological history of Scots”. Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia.

b → Ø / m_l t → Ø / {p,k}_# (“except in some inflected forms” for *kt)

d → Ø / n_ d → Ø / l_#

s → ʃ / _E (E_ also?)

f → Ø “in certain contexts”

/k g/ remain unpalatalized when E_

{ϕ,x} → Ø / _# (seems to be sporadic)

ʌ → xw (some speakers seem to have resisted this)

og → ʌu

ul became some sort of diphthong or vowel (possibly one of u:, uw, ʌw), but the article isn’t very clear

ol al → ou a: → ʌu {a,ɔ}

Vowel shift:

— ai → ei → əi / when stem-final

— u: → ʌu / when-stem final, in northern varieties

— ø: → wi / {k,g}_ (in Mid Northern dialects)

— ø: → i (in northern dialects)

— ø: → (j){u,ʌ} / _{k,x} (outcome varies depending upon dialect)

— a → i / _n (in northern varieties)

— a → e / _n (otherwise)

— a → {e,e} / _rC

— ai oi ui ei au ou iu ε(o)u → e: oe əi i: {a:,ɔ:} ʌu ju j(ʌ)u

— ε: → ei (→ əi?) / in some northern varieties

— i: e: ε: a: o: u: {ø:,y:} → əi i {i,e} e o u ø

— æ → ε / _C[+alveolar]

— a ɔ u → {a,a} ɔ ʌ

Application of the Scottish vowel-length rule:

— V → V: / _{r,F[+voiced],$,#}

— əi → ai / _{r,F[+voiced],$,#} (pursuant to the above)

j → Ø / CC_

h → Ø / V_V

Final obstruents devoice

a → ʊ? (→ o) / _ʌ

Some vowel reduction seems to have occurred in unstressed syllables

ai u → ei ʏ / _ (C...){i(:),j} (short only; in the case of [ʏ] at least this was not yet phonemic)

a → ɛ / _ (C...){i(:),j} (conjectured based on data from the “Germanic umlaut” article)

u: → ʊw / _V (probably, in most areas)

u: → ʊw / _V (probably, in areas that did not undergo the above change, such as Limburg)

u: → ʊ: (probably, in areas with u: → ʊw / _V)

ei ou → e: o: (except in southeastern dialects; *ei as a result of the umlaut of *ai was not affected)

u: → y:

iu → ju / #_ (in some northern dialects)

iu → {y:,io} (outcome varies depending upon dialect; the former seems more typical)

iw → yw (dialectal)

{ie,ia,io} uo → iə uə

Umlaut phonemicizes, but only for umlauts of non-diphthongal short vowels (except in extreme eastern dialects); [ʏ] becomes a phoneme

f θ s → v ð z / syllable-initially (h → fi?)

V → ə / if short and unstressed

f → {x,ç} / _t (the former seems to have occurred in northern dialects, the latter in southern ones)

θ ð → t d

{u, uw} u → ɔw o (except in the southeast)

{ol, al} {ar, er} or → ɔu a:r o:r / _C[+dental]

V[-long +stress] → V: / in open syllables (ɤ → {œ:, ø: here but this is not phonemically important; there seem to have been qualitative differences between original long vowels and long vowels resulting from this change—lengthened i: seems to have become er, but lengthened a: merged with original a:); does not affect original long vowels or vowels in diphthongs

l → u / o_{t,d}#

The change of /f/ to a velar fricative is often reverted by analogy

i: y: → ei œy

u: → ɒu (? conjectured based on the above diphthongization and on developments in Polder Dutch vowels)

Hard-vs.-soft-G phenomena:

— x ɣ → {x, ɣ} {ɣ, x, ɣ} / in northern dialects

— x ɣ → ɕ j / in southern dialects (the articles use velar phonemes here but describes them as “front velar”; based on the description and on representations in other articles, the palatal phonemes are used here)

 Umlaut applies; going by the orthography, only  $a \rightarrow e \ / \ \_ (C \dots) \{i(:),j\}$  is often marked (and even then haphazardly), but based upon reflexes in the daughter languages it seems that the umlaut had to apply to the other back vowels too

NB: The original document heavily uses Slavistic notation as opposed to IPA; I've done the best I could in figuring this stuff out but be warned of possible errors

sk x → ɕtɕ ɕ / _E x → ɕ / E_

ɛl → lɔ / T_T "in certain cases (mostly after a PSl. palato-alveolar")

ɔl ɔr ɛl ɛr → lɔ rɔ lɛ rɛ / T_T

ɔr ɔl → ra la / #_T "in syllables with long vowels"

ɔr ɔl → rɔ lɔ / #_T

C → Cʲ / _E ! /j ɕ ʒ

j → jʲ / {p,b,m,v}_ (sporadic)

ɛ ẽ ɛ: → ɔ ẽ a / _C[-palatalized +dental] (also sporadically before plain non-dentals)

ɛ: → ɛ

Havlik's law:

— {ɔ, ɔ} → e / iambic counting from U# or a syllable not containing a yer

— {ɔ, ɔ} → Ø / in even syllables counting iambic from U# or a syllable not containing a yer

— "[H]owever: in the vicinity of *j the development of yers did not comply with the aforementioned law"

ɔ → a: / _r

ɔl → ɔ(:)ɫ / P_

ɔl → ɛɫ / K_

ɔl → ɫu / else

ɔl → ɫu / C[+dental]_

ɔl → ɛɫ / P_C[+dental -palatalized]

ɔl → il / P_

ɔl → ɔ(:)ɫ

ɔ → a: / r.C[+dental -palatalized]

ɔr → i(:)ɹ → {ɛ(:)r, ɛ(:)ɹ} → {ɛr, ɛɹ}

{ẽ, ẽ} → ã

a ɛ i ɔ u i ã → a: ɛ: i: ɔ: u: i: ã: / _{C/U}[+voiced][lost yer] (i.e., a voiced consonant or a cluster with one)

ajɛ → ɛ: in adjectives, a: in verbs {aja,ɔja} {ɔjɛ,ijɛ} ijɛ → a: ɛ: i:
 {ɛ(:)jɛ,ɪjɛ,ɔjɛ,uɪjɛ,ijɛ} → ɛ:
 {ɔjɔ̃,ɔ̃jɔ̃,ɪjɔ̃} → ɔ̃:
 ɪjɪ ɪjɪ → i i jɪ → i / utterance-initially (cf. English utterance-initial glottal stops before vowels) ɪ ɪ → i i / -j ji → i / #- {aja,ɛja,ɪja,ɔja} → ipaa:
 iji iji → i i
 ɔvi → Ø
 O[+voice] → O[-voice] / -# (unless followed by some type of voiced consonant, be it any type of consonant or just an obstruent—this differs by location)
 ɔ → ɔ: / -{r,l} (sporadic, perhaps analogical)
 Ø → h / -ɪ
 Mobile stress → initial stress → penultimate stress (in most areas)
 V → Ø / unstressed (sporadic)
 i → Ø / -# “in the infinite and imperative desinences. . .some verbs have never been affected due to a potential ‘difficult’ cluster that would result, instead they got an analogical final -j extension” tsi zɪ → tɕ zɪ / Vi u → u i / {l,j}- (sporadic) tʃ dʃ sʃ zʃ nʃ lʃ lʃ → tɕ dɕ ɕ z ɲ r ɬ l (this last probably not before /i/) i: u: ɪ: → i u ɪ
 ǣ → ẽ / short only
 ǣ: → ǣ → ẽ
 a: ɔ: ɛ: → ɒ o e
 V: → V in certain frequently-used words
 Sporadic (de)nasalization of vowels; “there were certain environments which favoured nasal-ity changes: in the vicinity of nasal consonants. . .and before sibilants”
 {i,ɪ} → ɛ / -C[+rhotic]
 k g → kʲ gʲ / -ɛ where the vowel is from a yer or a borrowing ki gi → kʲi gʲi
 ʃi zi tʃi dʒi ci zi → ʃi zɪ tʃɪ dʒɪ tsi zi
 ʃ ʒ tʃ dʒ ɕ z → ʃ z tʃ dʒ ts ʒ
 r̥ → ʃ / C[-voiced]-
 r̥ → ʃ / -C[+voiced]
 r̥ → zɪ / else
 ɛ → ɔ / -ɬ (if the vowel was from a yer) {ɛ,a} → ɔ (sporadic)
 V → ɛ (sporadic, analogical)

17.12.1.1.5 Latin to Portuguese Mecislau

NB: Due to problems when the board migrated to a different system, a lot of the special characters were replaced with ⟨?⟩. In many cases these have been replaced with ⟨∅⟩ because it was likely that this was what was meant, but conditional ⟨?⟩ has either been left alone or attempted to have been filled in from context. In some cases, conditional ⟨?⟩ may have been used to mark stress or syllable boundaries. Take such changes with a grain of salt and use at your own risk. Further, Mecislau gives some dual-output changes, which distinguish between vulgar and “semi-learned” outcomes.

17.12.1.1.6 Vulgar Latin to Old Provençal Pogostick Man, from Grandgent, Charles Hall (1905), An outline of the phonology and morphology of old Provençal, Revised Edition

NB: Use at your own peril. Trying to put a chronology to this is sort of like what I imagine undergoing a root canal would be like, as is figuring out the conditioning on a lot of these things because of the convention Grandgent uses. Nevertheless, I have tried and probably largely failed. In any case the sections regarding the development of the vowels are placed first, because the source does that and other Romance changes posted here do similarly, and the grouping of the consonants is in large part informed by the source. Also, I use % here to denote a syllable boundary because I didn't want to have to open yet another window so I could throw a sigma into my document.

Stress shift: Secondary stress shifts to two syllables away from the penult. If the secondary tonic precedes the tonic, that vowel is considered stressed for the purpose of subsequent sound changes, and at some point the intervening vowel drops. Vowel changes assume the changes in Vulgar Latin as listed elsewhere in this thread.

$VN \rightarrow V$ : /  $\_S$  (except for the prefixes con-, in-); I'm assuming this change happened in Vulgar Latin and then vowel length went to quality

STRESSED VOWELS

- $i \rightarrow e$
- $u \rightarrow o$  (this change seems to have happened later, hence is listed separately)
- $\text{ɔ} \rightarrow y$  /  $\_ \{u, P, k, g, i\}$  (in northwestern dialects)
- $\text{ɔ} \rightarrow \text{ye}$  /  $\_ \{u, P, k, g, i\}$  (in western dialects, Limousin, and Auvergne)
- $\text{ɔ} \rightarrow \text{yo}$  /  $\_ \{u, P, k, g, i\}$  (in Languedoc)
- $\text{ɔ} \rightarrow \{\text{ye}, \text{yo}, \text{ɔ}\}$  /  $\_ \{u, P, k, g, i\}$  (in southern dialects)
- $a \rightarrow \text{a}$  /  $\_N$  (Rouergue, Limousin, Auvergne, Dauphiné)
- $a \rightarrow \text{a}$  /  $\_ \#$  in monosyllables and oxytones (Rouergue, Limousin, Auvergne, Dauphiné)
- $a \rightarrow \text{ã}$  (I have no idea what is going on here. Grandgent seems to distinguish an open and close /a/, and I have listed his open a as /ã/, which seems to have been distinct from /ɔ/, but beyond this section it doesn't really seem to matter very much)
- $\text{ã} \text{ } \epsilon \text{ } \text{ɔ} \rightarrow a \text{ } e \text{ } o$  /  $\_N$  (in Limousin and neighboring regions, the last two particularly in Limousin, Languedoc, and Gascon, though when  $\_j$  this change may have been blocked)
- $\epsilon \text{ } \text{ɔ} \rightarrow j\epsilon \text{ } w\text{ɔ}$  (intermittent, “least common in the southwest”)
- $e \rightarrow i$  /  $\_V$  (and possibly  $V\_?$ )
- $e \rightarrow i$  /  $\_ (C \dots) i \{C(C \dots) V, \#\}$
- $\epsilon \rightarrow j\epsilon$  /  $\_ \{u, i, \text{ɹ}, \text{r}^j, \text{f}, \text{ʒ}, \text{j}, \text{t}, \text{d}, \text{ʒ}\}$  (except in some northern and western dialects, or if this  $u \leftarrow l$  or if this  $i \leftarrow \delta$ )

- ju → jeu
- o → y /  $\_ \{tʃ, dʒ, it, id\}$  (did not occur in Dauphiné)
- o → y /  $_ n$  (in northern and western dialects)
- o → y /  $_ i #$  (in Bordeaux, Auvergne, and some of Languedoc)
- ɔ → {ɔ, we} (in southwestern dialects)
- u → y
- o → u (during the literary period)

- B → Ø /  $_ o$
- E → j (presumably in the vicinity of another vowel)
- V → Ø (though /a/ seemed to resist this)

INITIAL-SYLLABLE VOWELS

- {a, œ, e, i} → e (here, ⟨œ⟩ denotes the reflex of the Latin vowel written this way, not a front rounded vowel)
- u → o
- au → a /  $\_ (C \dots) u$
- V → Ø /  $_ r$  (seemed to be an intermittent change)
- Lots and lots of analogical formations

INTERTONIC VOWELS

- V → Ø (again, /a/ seemed to resist this change, which was itself generally blocked by analogy)

PENULT VOWELS

- V → Ø / “penult of paroxytones”, though /a/ often remained “as an indistinct e”, probably /ə/
- V often remained when  $\{tʃ, dʒ, j\}_-$ , especially if CC $\_$ , or when  $\{(k)s, s, sj\}_-$
- V is retained when P_C[+dental]
- CVK → CVj (intermittent if C was a resonant)
- V → Ø /  $lv_r$  (dialect-dependent)
- e → i /  $\_ (C \dots) i (C \dots) \#$

FINAL VOWELS

- (Again, /a/ seems to be a persistent exception to these)
- V → Ø / R $\_ (C \dots)$
- Grandgent remarks that /i/ was probably the last vowel to drop out
- a → o in most dialects except Gascon and Languedoc; final -as remained in “Limousin and some others”

- /i/ and /u/ remain when "V_ (then u is subject to the changes listed above—u → y, &c.)
- e u → e o / _nt#
- -os remains "in the extreme east"
- Final -i remains "as late as the 12th century" in some regions (Aude, Tarn, Aveyron, Corrèze, and some pockets of Haute-Garonne)
- Epenthesis of /e/ in 2SG "of some verbs"
- V → "indistinct e" (probably /ə/) if dropping it would create ugly consonant clusters:
  - C_L, P_C[+dental], C_tʃ, C_k, C_m, C_n where "originally separated by the vowel of the penult" (proparoxytones)
  - K_r (paroxytones)
  - Where the cluster would be unwieldy otherwise, apocope happened
  - Final /(m)bj mnj pj mj/ "required a supporting vowel" (dialect-dependent)
- V → e "in many late words"

K → Ø / _l (not always, but this was a general change)

v → b / r_ (sporadic)

18.3 Tuparí

As pertains to this section, the vowels given in the form  $\langle \{V_1/V_2\} \rangle$  herein may have apparently been some sort of alternation in vowel grade or quality. Also, the names of these languages were researched on the Wikipedia; they are in many cases different from the names cited within the source papers proper.

Moore and Galucio (1994) give the following inventory for Proto-Tuparí:

	Bilabial	Alveolar	Palatal	Velar	Labiovelar	Glottal
Stop	p	t		k	k <sup>w</sup>	ʔ
Nasal	m	n		ŋ	ŋ <sup>w</sup>
Fricative	β					h
Affricate		ts (n)dz
Liquid		r~D	j~j̃~ɲ

	Front	Central	Back
High	i ĩ	ɨ ɨ̃	u ũ
Mid	e ĕ
Low		a ã

*u *ũ may have actually been *o *õ, respectively. Additionally, the following ablaut pairs have been reconstructed:

$a \sim *e$
 $e \sim *a$ $\tilde{i} \sim *\tilde{e}$

21 Lakes Plain

Clouse (1993) reconstructs the following phonological inventory for Proto-Lakes Plain:

	Bilabial	Alveolar	Velar
Stop	p b	t d	k
	Front	Central	Back
High	i		u
Mid	e		o
Low		a

Additionally, *r is of uncertain reconstruction and is most likely an allophone of *d.

For the following sound changes, a circumflexed vowel refers to an “extra-high” or “fricativized” vowel. There are a few cases where I may have either missed, misread, or put in an extraneous sound change to extra-high vowels; many of these were due to my perception of changes involving extra-high vowels being listed without a change creating them.

23 Macro-Arawakan

Dixon (2004) gives the following reconstruction for Proto-Arawá:

	Bilabial	Coronal	Postalveolar	Velar	Glottal
Nasal	m	n
Plosive	p p <sup>h</sup> b ɓ	t t <sup>h</sup> d ɗ		k k <sup>h</sup> g ɠ	ʔ
Fricative		s			h
Affricate		ts ts <sup>h</sup> dz	tʃ
Liquid		r

	Front	Central	Back
High	i
Mid	e		o
Low		a

Dixon states “[i]t is likely that, as in modern languages, **o* ranged over [u] and [o]”. Further, he notes that “**w* could have been a voiced bilabial fricative [β], or a labial-velar semivowel [w] (or could have had both as allophones), and **j* could have been a voiced alveolar affricate [dz], a voiced postalveolar affricate [dʒ], or a voiced palatal stop [j]”.

Dixon also hypothesizes that there was an Arawán language that eventually died out after gaining substrate status; he has attempted to identify sound changes from Proto-Arawá to this hypothetical language. While most likely incomplete his findings are presented below along with those of the other languages.

In addition, though it is not encountered in these changes, there is a phoneme that crops up in forms of the first-person singular pronoun which has various reflexes in many Athabaskan languages; Krauss (1976b) represents it as *$. Leer transcribed it as *š<sup>y</sup> in 2005:284 but in 2008 opted to use the *$ transcription.

NB: The great majority of changes in this section are for the respective series of consonants, not for individual ones; therefore, changes specific to single consonants are marked so, and the reader should assume that unless explicitly stated, all of the following changes apply to the entire consonantal series. At the recommendation of Jan Strasser, the following conventions will be used to refer to the series; these are based on the abbreviations Whimemsz gave on the original Correspondence Library page, derived from the voiceless members of each series:

1. T, dental stops
2. TŁ, laterals
3. TS, dental affricates and fricatives
4. TŠ, palatals
5. TŠ<sup>w</sup>, labialized palatals
6. K, front (palatalized) velars
7. Q, uvulars
8. Q<sup>w</sup>, labialized uvulars

Whimemsz was unsure of the abbreviation of the glottal series. In addition, there also exist a series of (inter-?)dentals, abbreviated TH, and one of retroflexes, abbreviated

TŠ. Changes marked with an asterisk, *, apply to the individual phone(me)s. These series will be referred to in this document by their respective numbers as per the above; the (inter)dental series and the retroflex series will here be treated as (9) and (10), respectively.

27 Niger-Congo

Hedinger (1987) reconstructs the following consonant inventory for Pre-Proto-Bantu:

	Labial	Alveolar	Palatal	Velar
Lenis nasal	'm	'n	'ɲ
Fortis nasal	m	n	ɲ	ŋ
Lenis stop	'p	't 'd	'ʃ	'k 'g
Fortis stop	p b	t d	c ɟ	k g
Unknown (stop?)		d <sub>2</sub>

	Front	Central	Back
High	i		u
Mid-high	e		o
Mid-low	ɛ		ɔ
Low		a

*'p *'c *'ɟ *'g appear confined to C<sub>1</sub> position; *ŋ, to C<sub>2</sub> position.

Hedinger also considers the Manenguba languages (and possibly the Mbo languages in general) as sharing a common ancestor with Proto-Bantu instead of being descended from it, although the author seems to use the abbreviation “PM” to refer to Proto-Manenguba.

Due to the scarcity of available resources on Niger-Congo historical phonology, there will likely be many overlaps or contradictions in the available data, maybe more so than in other sections, even Indo-European. What is included in the Index is what is available.

If C is an approximant, changes involving a nasalized V<sub>1</sub> will also affect C<sub>2</sub> and V<sub>2</sub>.*

28 Oto-Manguean

Rensch (1977) reconstructs Proto-Oto-Manguean as having had the following phonemic inventory:

	Alveolar	Palatal	Velar	Laryngeal
Nasal	n
Plosive	t		k k <sup>w</sup>	ʔ
Fricative	s			h
Liquid		Y	w

30 Quechumaran

Orr and Longacre (1968) reconstruct Proto-Quechumaran as having the following inventory:

	Bilabial	Alveolar	Postalveolar	Retroflex	Palatal	Velar	Uvular	Glottal
Nasal	m	n			ɲ
Plosive	p	t				k	q	ʔ
Fricative	ɸ	s	ʃ	ʂ			χ	h
Affricate		ts	tʃ	tʂ
Liquid		r l	ɭ
Semivowel					j	w
			Front	Central	Back
		High	i		u
		Low		a

31 Salishan

Kuipers (1981) gives the following reconstruction for the Proto-Salish phoneme inventory (converted into IPA):

	Labial	Coronal	Palatal	Velar	Postvelar	Glottal
Nasal	m m <sup>2</sup>	n n <sup>2</sup>
Stop	p p'	t t'		k k <sup>w</sup> k' k <sup>w</sup> '	q q <sup>w</sup> q' q <sup>w</sup> '	ʔ
Affricate		ts ts' tɬ'
Resonant		r r <sup>2</sup> l l <sup>2</sup>	j j <sup>2</sup>	ɰ ɰ <sup>2</sup> w w <sup>2</sup>	ʃ ʃ <sup>w</sup> ʃ' ʃ <sup>w</sup> '
			Front	Central	Back
		High	i		u
		Mid		ə
		Low		a

For the following changes, the superscript numerals <sup>1</sup>, <sup>2</sup>, and <sup>3</sup> refer to low, mid, and high tones, respectively. Not all Salishan languages have all three tones; for most, there is no tone <sup>2</sup> (mid). Vowel pairs in between curly braces { } and with a tilde between are pairs which apparently existed in some sort of ablaut-like alternation.

32.1.1 Late Middle Chinese to Old Mandarin

Ran, from Hsueh, F.S. (1975), Phonology of Old Mandarin

NB: Ran says, “The author uses V1, V2, V3, V4, Vn, Vch, and Vta to represent Late Middle Chinese vowels. I am going to very tentatively assign the values of o, a, ia, e,?, a(ch) and a(ta) to these vowels [emphasis added]. These should be taken as orthographical convenience rather than actual speculation.” It should be noted that the vowel represented by <?> could be palatalized. Ran adds, “I am also going to number tones according to their traditional order, i.e. F1, F2, F3, F4, F5. Since tones change rapidly, it is impossible to accurately reconstruct their values; we can only know how many there were, and agree on an order to renumerate them. Middle Chinese starts out with no F2.” For the purposes of this list of sound changes, tones are superscript numbers following vowel markers.

33 Siouan-Iroquoian

Based upon Julian and Chafe, Proto-Siouan-Iroquoian, if it existed, appears to have had the following phonetic inventory:

	Bilabial	Dental	Alveolar	Postalveolar	Palatal	Velar	Glottal
Nasal	m		n
Plosive	p p <sup>h</sup>		t t <sup>h</sup>			k k <sup>h</sup>	ʔ
Fricative		θ	s	ʃ		x	h
Liquid			r		j	w

	Front	Central	Back
High	i ī		u ũ
Mid	e ě		o õ
Low		a ã

For this following section, the sound transcribed here as ⟨r⟩ may in actuality represent something akin to /ɾ/. Additionally, [on liquids in Siouan languages].

Siouan-Iroquoian, and for that matter the inclusion of Yuchian and Caddoan within the former and the latter, respectively, is far from universally accepted; their inclusion here is in large part due to the available sources giving correspondences for each. It was unknown whether Proto-Caddoan was the same as the Proto-Iroquois-Caddoan indicated in Cafe’s paper, so the Caddoan changes have been presented after the main Iroquoian changes.

Per KneeQuickie, Whimemsz wishes to “[n]ote that Siouan-Iroquoian is a proposed, rather than firmly-demonstrated, language grouping”.

(From Chafe, Wallace L. (1964), “Another Look at Siouan and Iroquoian”. American Anthropologist New Series, 66:852 – 862; Julian, Charles (2010), “A History of the Iroquoian Languages”, University of Manitoba, Winnipeg; and from cedh aumdmah’s Iroquoian changes)

34 Tanoan

Proto-Tanoan is reconstructed as having had the following consonantal phonology, at least for phones in initial position:

	Bilabial	Alveolar	Velar	Glottal
Nasal	m	n
Stop	p p <sup>h</sup> p' b	t ts t <sup>h</sup> ts <sup>h</sup> t' ts' d dz	k k <sup>w</sup> k <sup>h</sup> k <sup>wh</sup> k' k <sup>w</sup> ' g g <sup>w</sup>	ʔ
Fricative		s		h
Glide	w

Only initials are reconstructed here. Vowels are believed to have had nasality and possibly length, though no correspondences are given here for sure. The affricates, as per Hale (1967), appear to have patterned as stops.

35 Trans-New Guinea

Pawley (2012) reconstructs the following inventory for Proto-Trans New Guinea. The use of the terms “apical” and “laminal” is his, but the table has been restructured somewhat.

	Labial	Apical	Laminal	Velar
Stop	p <sup>m</sup> b	t <sup>n</sup> d	c <sup>ɲ</sup> ʃ	k <sup>ŋ</sup> g
Nasal	m	n		ŋ

Mid	e	o
Open	æ	ɑ

For the series of changes starting with Proto-Uralic to Pre-Finnic and ending with Proto-Finnic to Livonian and in several other of Tropylium's contributions, the following alterations to the stand-in variable list apply.

- /@/ means that a vowel assimilates to the one that comes before it.
- /A O U/ assimilate to [ɑ o u] or to [æ ø y], with the specific phone dependent upon the vowel harmony.
- ê ô may have been semi-rounded forms of /ɪ ʊ/.
- <sup>x</sup> is a final which geminates the next word's first consonant; if no such consonant begins the word, [ʔ:] or hiatus occurs here.
- X stands for the second mora of a syllable, be it a consonant, as part of a diphthong, or as a segment of a long vowel.

Changes marked with an asterisk are somewhat contentious.

Tropylium wishes to note that his sound changes are subject to change. (Note 2014/06/21: As per a Tumblr post of his, <http://tropylium.tumblr.com/post/81916666722/index-diachronica-4-2>, many of the compilations presented here are out of date or erroneous, and he still is updating his page on Finnic, <http://www.frathwiki.com/Finnish>.)

37 Uto-Aztecan

The Wikipedia provides the following reconstruction for the phonology of Proto-Uto-Aztecan, which here is adapted with slight modifications as to the layout:

	Bilabial	Coronal	Palatal	Velar	Glottal
Nasal	m	n		ŋ
Plosive	p	t		k k <sup>w</sup>	ʔ
Fricative		s
Affricate		ts
Rhotic		r
Approximant			j	w

	Front	Central	Back
Close	i	ɨ	u
Mid			o
Open		a

Quoth the Wiki, “*n and *ŋ may have actually been *l and *n, respectively.” It should be noted that there exists some discrepancy between this given reconstruction and in that set up for the studies deriving the reconstructions below. Radius Solis includes *h and *l as distinct phonemes as per the source he cited.

For the following Uto-Aztecan changes,  $V_u$ ,  $V_s$ , and  $V_n$  refer to normal (“unaffected”), “suspending”, and “nasalizing” vowels, respectively. According to Radius Solis, “Reconstructed PUA had three sets of vowels; this book calls them ‘suspending’, ‘unaltering’, and ‘nasalizing’. The nasalizing vowels likely were actually nasal, but it’s uncertain; their existence was deduced only by the sound changes that revolved around them. There’s few good guesses yet about the nature of the ‘suspending’ vowels, but their existence is likewise deducible from the sound changes that have been affected by them across a majority of the UA family - more changes than from the nasalizing series, occurring in all UA branches, enough to be pretty certain that it was a reality in PUA.”

38 Vasconic

The following phonology for Proto-Basque (not Proto-Vasconic) is adapted from Egurtzegi (2013), citing Martinet (1974 [1950]: 533), but differs from that given in Tables 4.3 – 4.6 when accounting for other data in the paper. Capital letters indicate fortis phonemes, and the affricates were fortis as well.

	Labial	Dental	Alveolar	Palatal	Velar	Glottal
Nasal		n N
Stop	p (P)	t T			k K
Fricative	f ?		ʃ ʃ			h
Affricate			tʃ tʃ
Liquid			r R l L
Glide				j	w

	Front	Central	Back
High	i		u
Mid	e		o
Low		a

ś → {s(:),ʃ} / -#

ś → s s → ʃ / i_# ts may become ʃs or s?: The written forms are ⟨xs⟩ and ⟨ss⟩

S[+ fortis] → S[- voice]: (specifically, the source lists t[+ fortis] k[+ fortis] → t(:) k(:), both of the tokens with optional length suffixes and *aTa → ⟨atta⟩, so I'm extrapolating)

 n[+ fortis] → n(:) / V_V
 n[- fortis] n[+ fortis] → {n,r}(?) n
 N → [+ same POA] / _S r[+ fortis] → r / _#
 r[+ fortis] → r
 Fortis *L is of uncertain outcome, being written as ⟨l⟩ or ⟨ll⟩
 g → k / #_ (sometimes?)
 There seem to have been a few (variant?) forms which possibly show height assimilation in vowels

Pre-Proto-Basque may have had some stuff involving reduplication that ended up dropping the first consonant fortis → aspirated / "in a prominent position" (i.e., word-initially?)

fortis  $\rightarrow$  [- voice] / else
 lenis  $\rightarrow$  devoiced / “in a prominent word-initial position” lenis  $\rightarrow$  voiced fricative ( $\rightarrow$  approximant, at least by the 12th Century?) / unstressed lenis (voiced)  $\rightarrow$  fricative /  $\{l, r, s, \text{ʃ}, V\} - \{l, r, s, \text{ʃ}, V\}$
 — At least one reconstruction seems to indicate \*s and \*ś, which may have been an affricate and /s/. Pretty reliably, \*-s tends to turn into -ts, and \*-ś  $\rightarrow$  -ts, probably after the below-mentioned affrication. Beyond that, it’s messy. \*-tso seems to have become -tʃo/-tʃu, though.
 $S^h \rightarrow F \rightarrow h (\rightarrow \emptyset) / \#-$
 $S \rightarrow S[+ \text{voiced}] / \#-$
 “[T]wo similar vocalic segments” usually contract, though some dialects (especially Biscayan) seem not to exhibit this $Vn \rightarrow \tilde{V} / \#$  (seems to have been reverted in most dialects, except for Souletin)
 $Vn \rightarrow \tilde{V} / \_V (?)$
 $V \rightarrow \tilde{V} / \_N$  (Souletin, perhaps in other dialects?)

 $d \text{ð} \rightarrow \text{ʃ} j / \{\text{ʎ},n\}_{-}$  (Guipuscoan, High Navarrese)
 $\{g,\gamma\} \rightarrow \{j,j\} / \{E,j\}_{-}$
 $g \rightarrow dʒ / \{E,j\}_{-}$  ("in some Biscayan areas")
 $j \rightarrow j \rightarrow j$  (northern High Navarrese, most Labourd, some Biscayan)
 $j \rightarrow j \rightarrow ʒ$  (Souletin, sporadic in northwestern Biscayan)
 $j \rightarrow j$  (some Biscayan and Navarrese)
 $j \rightarrow j \rightarrow \text{ʃ}$  (typical of Low Navarrese)

$j \rightarrow j \rightarrow ʒ \rightarrow dʒ$  (northwestern Biscayan)
 $j \rightarrow j \rightarrow ʒ \rightarrow ʃ$  (Aescoan, Salazarese, Roncalese, most southern High Navarrese)
 $j \rightarrow j \rightarrow ʒ \rightarrow ʃ \rightarrow x$  (Guipuscoan, northwestern High Navarrese, eastern Biscayan)
 $j \rightarrow \chi$  (probably through intermediates like above, Wikipedia doesn't go into particulars of how and where)
 $\lambda n \rightarrow jl jn$  ("common in Low Navarrese, Labourdin, and is even regular in the High Navarrese of Sakana")
 Vowel syncope:
 —  $V \rightarrow \emptyset / S_{-}\{r,l\}$  (more common in Roncalese and Salazarese, but also in Navarrese and Aescoan?)
 —  $V \rightarrow \emptyset / C[+ \text{ sibilant}]_r$  (Roncalese and Salazarese)
 —  $V \rightarrow \emptyset / \{O,r,r\}_O$  (Roncalese, Salazarese, Navarrese, Aescoan)
 $n[+ \text{ fortis}] \rightarrow n$
 Something about final devoicing of stops and initial stops losing voicing as a result of vowel deletion
 $e \rightarrow \emptyset / \#Ur_{-}$
 $a \rightarrow \emptyset / V_{-}\#$  (Guipuscoan; happens because of reanalysis of the definite article)
 $V \rightarrow \emptyset / \#_{-}$ , in trisyllables
 $i \rightarrow \emptyset / \#_{-}$ , in disyllables
 $u \{o,e\} \rightarrow \emptyset a / \#_{-}$ , in disyllables (eastern dialects)
 "a or -e from the definite article" is dropped Markina Biscayan and Getxo Biscayan
 Some vowel metathesis only when vowels are matched in height $hu hi \rightarrow u i / \{o,e\}_{-}$  (also happened with /a/ sometimes, but usually such sequences just dropped one vowel)
 Something about diphthongs occurring where intervocalic /n/ was lost
 $ViC \rightarrow VC^j$
 Glide dissimilation if the homorganic vowel was in the following syllable, but usually the glide just deleted
 $ai \rightarrow ei \rightarrow e$  (rare)
 $au \rightarrow ai / !_\{r,r,s,s\}$  (Souletin, Roncalese)
 $eu \rightarrow \{e,egu\}$
 $ei \rightarrow e / \#_{-}$
 $oi \rightarrow ui$  (rare)
 $e\check{d} (\rightarrow e ?) \rightarrow j / \#_{-}V$ $e \rightarrow j / \#_{-}a$ $e \rightarrow \emptyset / \#_{-}e$
 $ua \rightarrow o$  "especially after a velar stop"
 $ue \rightarrow e$
 $C[- \text{ voice}] \rightarrow C[+ \text{ voice}] / \{l,N\}_{-}$  (not Roncalese or Souletin)
 Some speakers (Labourd and Low Navarrese?) have  $\mathfrak{r}$  for  $r$ , and a few have  $\mathfrak{g}$  for  $r$
 $l$  gets a velar(ized?) articulation in Souletin (possibly only in the coda?)

Souletin preserves something involving historical aspiration in pretonic position, apparently

Souletin keeps initial f- and tf- distinct; Labourdin only has f-, and the rest apparently only have tf-?

C[+ sibilant] → C[+ affricate] / -#

ɿ ts → ɿ ts̥ (Biscayan, partially in Guipuscoan, Donostia, San Sebastián, though these latter two may be varieties of Guipuscoan)

ɿ → ɿ / -{C, #} (sometimes)

From the Wikipedia article on Biscayan: “Convergence of sibilants: z, x and s > x, s and tz, tx and ts > tz.” I’m not sure what this means. ⟨s z⟩ are apparently ɿ ɿ, and ⟨x⟩ is f.

its → tf / -# (Biscayan)

oa ea → u(e) i(e) / -#

Beterri Guipuscoan has VjV# where Biscayan has VɿV# and regular Basque has VV#

ɿ → tf / #- (Guipuscoan)

ɿ → ʃ “for most French Basque speakers (Trask 1997:84), due to French influence” according to Campbell

Accentual changes:

— Navarrese and Labourdin seem to have gotten rid of phonemic accent; High Navarrese typically stresses the penult, while Low Navarrese and Labourdin are claimed to lack stress on the word level.

— Guipuscona, southeastern Biscayan, and western varieties of Navarrese stress the second syllable (unless it is a disyllable, in which case the first syllable gets the accent, though a few varieties don’t do this).

— North Biscayan does something with roots and affixes marked for prosody; “[m]ost native roots and almost all singular affixes are unaccented”; loans, “compounds and plural affixes” tend to be accented. Stress is typically assigned to the syllable immediately before the accent, but a few areas accent the penult or the antepenult.

— Souletin does its own thing with accent. Stress usually falls on the penult, but contractions can mess with this (one of the examples given in the paper is “alhába ‘daughter’ + abs. sg. -a > alhabá ‘the daughter’”). Something similar is posited for “older... Salazarese”. Roncalese was much the same, but the stress was stem-oriented as opposed to word-oriented unless contraction occurred, and there’s some stuff about proparoxytones that Souletin didn’t have.

$\text{æ} \ i \rightarrow \text{e} \ i / \_ \text{ŋ}$ ; some speakers (esp. in southern regions) may also have PIN-PEN and “a single phoneme in contrast to the nasal diphthong [ãĩ] of the U.S. Northeast” (though the article doesn’t specify what this is; maybe it’s just plain ã)

/ɪ/ otherwise has a highly variable pronunciation

$\text{æ} \rightarrow \{ \text{e}_{\text{̞}}, \text{i}_{\text{̞}} \} / \_ \text{N}$

$\{ \text{æ}, \text{e} \} \rightarrow \text{ɛ} / \_ \text{ɹ}$

$\text{æ} \rightarrow \text{a}$

$\text{ʊ} \wedge \text{ɛ} \rightarrow \wedge \text{ɛ} \text{ æ}$

$\text{ɑ} \rightarrow \text{ɔ}$  (does not occur in Sacramento)

$\text{o}_{\text{̞}} \rightarrow \text{e}_{\text{̞}}$  (“common only within certain social groups”)

e: ø: o: → ei œy ɔu

40.5 Old-English-to-Scots Vowel Shifts

Pogostick Man, from Wikipedia contributors (2014), “Phonological history of Scots”. Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia. https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=Phonological\_history\_of\_Scots&oldid=582962563; and Wikipedia contributors (2014), “Scottish Vowel Length Rule”. Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia. https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=Scottish\_vowel\_length\_rule&oldid=589349104

ai → ei → əi / when stem-final

u: → ʌu / when-stem final, in northern varieties

ø: → wi / {k,g} (in Mid Northern dialects)

ø: → i (in northern dialects)

ø: → (j){u,ʌ} / _{k,x} (outcome varies depending upon dialect)

a → i / _n (in northern varieties)

a → e / _n (otherwise)

a → {ɛ,e} / _rC

ai oi ui ei au ou iu ɛ(o)u → e: oe əi i: {ɑ:,ɔ:} ʌu ju j(ʌ)u

ɛ: → ei (→ əi?) / in some northern varieties

i: e: ɛ: a: o: u: {ø:,y:} → əi i {i,e} e o u ø

æ → ɛ / _C[+alveolar]

a ɔ u → {a,ɑ} ɔ ʌ

Application of the Scottish vowel-length rule:

— V → V: / _{r,F[+voiced],$,#}

— əi → ai / _{r,F[+voiced],$,#} (pursuant to the above)

40.6 Great Ngamo Tone Shift

Pogostick Man, from Schuh, Russel (2005), “The Great Ngamo Tone Shift”

In the Gudi dialect, the tone on a given domain (which can be more than one syllable/mora, as long as said syllables/morae are consecutive and share the same tone) shift to the following domain, with a low tone cropping up on the first domain. The original tone of the word-final domain floats or tacks itself onto the next domain, depending upon the surrounding conditions. When utterance-final, these tones remain on that domain. This can cause a falling tone, but not a rising tone, which Ngamo does not permit; where such would occur, tone goes to high.

40.7 Great Vowel Shift (English)

Jaaaaaa and Ran, citing <http://www.peak.org/~jeremy/dictionary/chapters/history.php>

i: u: → əj əw → əj əw
 e: o: → i: u:
 ɛ: → e: → i:
 a: ɔ: → ɛ: o: → e: ow → ej (əw)

40.8 Greek Vowel Shift

Chris Zoller, from Trask, R.L. (1996), Historical Linguistics

u(:) → y(:)
 o: → u:
 e: ɛ: → i: e:
 ai oi → ε y:
 e: → i:
 y(:) ɔ: → i(:) ɔ
 εu au → εv av

40.9 Kikuyu Tone Shift

Pogostick Man, from Schuh, Russel (2007), “The Great Ngamo Tone Shift (GNTS)”

Tones move to the following vowel with the initial syllable acquiring a low tone. Original final tones are lost.

40.10 Late Proto-Finnic to Savonian Vowel Shift

PM_Vanhanen

“Long close-mid vowels have become diphthongs:”
 e: ø: o: → ie yø uo

“In some dialects, they have shifted further to /ua/, /yæ/ and /iæ/ or /ia/ “depending on front-back vowel harmony: /tieto/ to /tiato/ but /tietæ/ to /tiætæ/.”

“These shifts have occurred in some eastern dialects.”

a: æ: ai æi → ua iæ ae æe

ei oi øi → e: oe øe

au ou → a: o:

æy øy → æ: ø:

eu → eo

li ni ri si → lʲi nʲi rʲi sʲi

40.11 Middle Chinese to Cantonese Vowel Shift (“The Inner-Outer Flip”)

Lone Wolf, from Newman, J. (1983). Cahiers de Linguistique Asie Orientale XII.1:65 – 79.

Relevant changes occurring before the shift:

a → ɔ / _{ɲ,k}

uə yə → ɔ œ / _{n,t}

ə → Ø / i_{ɲ,k}

Ø → ə / C[+ labiovelar]_i

Ø → ə / _u

V → V: / _#

The actual vowel shift:

ə → a

a → {a:,ə} “(the environments for these respective changes are somewhat unclear)”

ə → a / _{i,u}

iəu → au

a → a: / _{i,u}

a → ə → Ø / i_u

Other relevant changes occurring at the same time:

ə → Ø / W_

W → Ø / C_

(Apparently, /i u/ either were or became glides in the appropriate positions)

40.12 Northern Cities Vowel Shift (English)

Pogostick Man, from Wikipedia contributors (2013), “Northern Cities Vowel Shift”. Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia. https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=Northern\_Cities\_Vowel\_Shift&oldid=581062574

æ raises and diphthongizes, typically becoming one of {ɛə eə ɪə}

ɑ ɔ → a ɑ

ɛ → ɐ

ʌ → ɔ

ɪ → ɪ̃

40.13 Old Norse to Faroese Vowel Shift

johanpeturdam

NB: “The reflexes of the vowels are given in the order of their reflex when stressed/long, and unstressed/short”

{a,æ:} → ɛa / a

a: → ɔa “(except NE of the Faroes → a:)” / ɔ

e → e: / ɛ

e: → ɛa “(except Suðuroy → e:)” / a “(except Suðuroy → ɛ)”

{i,y} → i: / ɪ

{i:,y:} → ui / u(i)

o → o: / ɔ

o: → {ɔu,ɛu,œu} / œ “(except Suðuroy → ɔ)”

u → u: / short: ʊ / unstressed: {o,ɔ}

u: → ʉu / ʏ

{œ,ɔ} → ø:/œ “(except Suðuroy → ʏ)”

40.14 Pre-Slavic Vowel Changes

Macska

“PIE *a and *o with their variants have merged in the Balto-Slavic period; below they’re written both as *a.”

e: → æ

en an → ẽ ã

ej → i

ew → ju

$i \rightarrow \text{ĩ} [\text{ə?}] \rightarrow \{e, a\}$  (strong)/ $\emptyset$  (weak) “in modern languages”
 $i: \rightarrow i$
 $a \text{ a:} \rightarrow o \text{ a}$
 $a j \rightarrow \{\text{æ}_2, i_2\}$  “(reduced)”
 $aw \rightarrow u$
 $u \rightarrow \text{ũ} [\text{ɤ?}] \rightarrow \{e, o, \text{ɤ}, a\}$  (strong)/ $\emptyset$  (weak) “in modern languages”
 $u: \rightarrow i$

40.15 Proto-Japanese to Old Japanese Vowel Shift

Pogostick Man, from Frellesvig, Bjarke and John Witman (2005), “The Japanese-Korean vowel correspondences”

$e \text{ o} \rightarrow \text{je wo} / \_ \#$
 $e \text{ o} \rightarrow i \text{ u} / \text{else}$
 $\{i, \text{ə}\} \rightarrow o$
 $\{u, i\} i \{, a, i \{ii, i\{a, \text{ə}\}\} u\{i, a, \text{ə}\} \rightarrow \text{wi e je wo}$

40.16 Development of Proto-Lolo-Burmese -i(C)# and -u(C)# to Lahu

Pogostick Man, from Jacques, Guillaume, and Alexis Michaud (2011), “Approaching the historical phonology of three highly eroded Sino-Tibetan languages: Naxi, Na and Laze”. Diachronica 28:4 (2011), 468 – 498; citing Matisoff 2003:186, 248 – 249, 314

$-i \text{ -i}\{p, k\} \text{ -it -i}\{m, \eta\} \text{ -in} \rightarrow -i \text{ -i? -i? -\varepsilon -i}$
 $-u \text{ -up -ut -uk -um -un -uŋ} \rightarrow -u \text{ -ɔ? -ə? -u? -ɔ -ə -\varepsilon}$

40.17 Proto-Maidun to Nisenian Vowel Shift

Pogostick Man, from Ultan, Russell (1964), “Proto-Maidun Phonology”. International Journal of American Linguistics, Vol. 30, No. 4 (Oct., 1964), 355 – 370.

$u \text{ i e a} \rightarrow y \text{ e a o}$

40.18 South African Chain Shift (English)

Pogostick Man, from Mesthrie, Rajend (2002), Language in South Africa

NB: The author gives ĭ as the shifted vowel but calls it “centralized”; based on this description, I’m calling it /i/

æ ɛ ɪ → ɛ e i

40.19 Southern [United States] Shift (English)

Pogostick Man, from Wikipedia contributors (2012), “Southern American English”.

ɛ → ɪ / _N

“Lax and tense vowels often neutralize before /l/” aɪ → aː / _#

aɪ → aː / _C[+ voiced]

aɪ → aɛː / else (only for some speakers)

aɪ → aː / else (only for some speakers)

æ ɛ ɪ → æj(ə) ɛj(ə) ij(ə)

ɛj(ə) ij(ə) i eɪ → ej(ə) ij(ə) ii ei

uʊ ou → uö öü (a bit of a guesstimate based upon the prose description in the article and the mean-formant-value chart cited from Labov, Ash & Bobert (2006))

ɔ → aʊ (for some speakers)

ɑɪ → ɒɪ (“often”)

z → d / _n (not strictly a vowel shift but included here anyway because it’s cool, and also because it doesn’t occur in ⟨hasn’t⟩ because of the influence of ⟨hadn’t⟩)

Stress reassignment to the initial syllable (again, not strictly a vowel shift)

Merger of ɔɪ and ɑɪ (“in some regions”)

Loss of distinction between ɪɪ and ɪəɪ, and between ʊəɪ and ɔɪ

Pronunciation of the ⟨l⟩ in words like ⟨walk⟩ and ⟨talk⟩ (again, not really a vowel development)

æ/ɑː → æɪ

41 Most-Wanted Sound Changes

This section replicates the “Most wanted sound changes” article from Knee Quickie. It is presented mostly as it was found with the following modifications:

- The formatting rules are not adhered to any longer due to the format, and the preamble (and table of contents) are omitted.
- Some liberty has been taken with the presentation of the  $*f \rightarrow p$  change in Afro-Asiatic.
- Bullets are no longer present.
- Some corrections have been made (e.g., to the conditioning of the Ōkami change of  $*t \rightarrow k$ ).
- Instead of footnotes, sources (where cited) are listed next to the relevant entries.
- Some URLs have been shortened using `http://is.gd` due to potential conflict with the way L<sup>A</sup>T<sub>E</sub>X handles the  $\langle\% \rangle$  character.
- Subsection 4 is specifically listed as being “empty as of yet” for aesthetic purposes.
- Wikipedia URLs have been changed to `https://`.

41.1 List 1: Simple Consonant Changes

$w \rightarrow p$  (Navajo, some Polynesian languages)
 $k^j g^j \rightarrow k g$  (Danish)
 $\acute{s} \rightarrow k$  (Possibly unconditional; some Samoyedic langs)
 $p^j \rightarrow k^j$  (some Romanian dialects, Tsakonian)
 $ts \rightarrow t$  (unconditional; some Samoyedic langs)
 $t \rightarrow k$  (general Polynesian)
 $n \rightarrow \eta$  (Samoan, but only in colloquial speech)
 $j \rightarrow p$  (some Polynesian languages, such as Levei and Drehet) (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Proto-Austronesian\\_language)
 $b \rightarrow \#c, -nc-$  (Sundanese)
 $\eta \rightarrow \{x, h\}$  (various Mayan languages)
 $h \rightarrow \eta$  (Nyole)
 $\text{ʕ} \rightarrow \eta$  (allegedly in European Hebrew, both Sephardic and Ashkenazi, but possibly not a sound change so much as a substitution) (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hebrew\\_language#Varieties\\_of\\_ayin, <http://sites.google.com/site/londonsephardiminhag/pronunciation>, <http://www.forward.com/articles/105938/>)
 $f \rightarrow p$  (? claimed to have occurred independently in Proto-Semitic and Proto-Omotc, and to a limited extent in Egyptian (but this may be related to the Semitic change); note that the Wikipedia article is cited to a single source and that source is admittedly theoretical, and acknowledges on page 77 another reconstruction that doesn't believe Proto-Afro-Asiatic had /f/ at all) (Page 77 of <http://is.gd/WNyXdn>, https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Proto-Afro-Asiatic\\_language)

tš → t (general Baltic-Finnic; may not be unconditional but was certainly the most common outcome)

r → g<sub>L</sub> → ɣ (Hiw) (<http://is.gd/jCDL01>)

mb nd → b dr (Nias)

41.2 List 2: Conditional or complex consonant changes

Western and Eastern Armenian often have swapped voicing in stop consonants: e.g. vardapet vs. vartabed. This is a result of changes related to aspiration.

w → f (Common Celtic; I'm not sure of the conditions)

m → n / ɪ (Tsakonian)

{t,k} → Ø / V_V (Marathi) probably with voiced stops as intermediates, since they also became silent

p → w / V_V (Marathi)

b d g → b: d: g: / V_V (some dialects of Italian; there may be more to it than this, since words like “repubblica” are in standard Italian and not just dialects)

t → k / ɹ̥ (Ōgami) (NB: The article doesn't have an underscore indicating whether this occurs before or after the /ɹ̥/, but the linked page indicates where this change occurred) (<http://amritas.com/101023.htm#10192359>)

n → i / ɹ̥ and sometimes other fricatives (Montana Salish)

41.3 List 3: Vowels

y → u (some mainland Greek dialects, and Tsakonian; this particular sound change has been said in some places to be impossible) (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tsakonian\_language#Consonants)

i u → ɹ̥ ɹ̥ (Ōgami) (<http://amritas.com/101023.htm#10192359>)
